Growing up in Indianapolis, Indiana, I was the quintessential energetic and curious kid. Whether it was exploring the woods and catching any critter in sight or organizing basketball, soccer, and roller hockey matches with the neighborhood kids, I was always on the move. These early passions seamlessly transitioned into my academic and professional pursuits, as I majored in both biology and mechanical engineering while balancing the demands of being a student-athlete playing soccer. Following graduation, I moved to Kansas City to begin a career with Owens Corning as a manufacturing engineer in a flagship insulation facility. Over the next decade, my career advanced through progressive operational leadership positions in various facilities nationwide, spanning from Oregon to Texas and eventually back to Indiana.

Throughout this journey, I've honed my expertise in streamlining operations, building engaged teams, and laying the groundwork for innovation. Leveraging my experience and extensive network of mentors, SME owners, and professional colleagues, I am eager to partner with NCA to acquire an SME and begin my next chapter in entrepreneurial success.

- Relationship centered
- Problem-solving mindset
- Strong vision
- Strategic growth
- Operational leadership

MY SEARCH

My target companies are value-add distribution and light manufacturing SMEs seeking a succession plan. My search focuses on profitable businesses in the Midwestern, United States but opportunistically would consider other regions.

This market is undergoing a significant transformation, swiftly adapting with digital technologies and analytics to minimize bottlenecks, streamline inventory management, and establish a direct connection to customers via e-commerce. As the Baby Boomer generation moves closer to retirement, forming partnerships for succession planning becomes vital to maintain and build upon their legacy.

My contribution

Through a decade of triumphs and challenges in operations, I've sharpened my skills in pinpointing, prioritizing, and executing initiatives that drive results and generate value.

I am dedicated to fostering change through thoughtful reflection, employing a playbook that integrates a cohesive vision, clear objectives, and regular evaluations to push forward or pivot as needed.
